A pivot to healthy eating after the New Year isn't a novel concept, but the nutritious eateries that opened in 2018—and those about to open—may make sticking to that pledge feel a little fresher.

In Season Food Shop

The newest resident of Somerville's Bow Market is a grocery specializing in local, seasonal produce, plus prepared foods made with the same ethos. Its grab-and-go options will include soups, salads, grain bowls and more. 1 Bow Market Way, Somerville

Mighty Love Food

Mighty Love Food seeks to disprove the notion that nutritious food can't be filling by offering hearty dishes like vegetable frittatas, vegan mac & cheese and a black bean-and-mushroom-based "Unburger." Salad bowls like the "Blue Groove" with buffalo roast cauliflower make up the core of its menu, and come in sandwich or wrap form, too. 155 Milk St.

Nourish Your Soul

This suburban juicery, which had existing locations in West Medford and Winchester, broke Boston ground in 2018 with a Beacon Hill spot. That's where you'll find cold-pressed juices, vegan smoothies and healthy dishes like forbidden rice salads and nut butter toasts. 282 Cambridge St.

Rhythm'N Wraps

What began as a food truck has become a full-time vendor of vegetarian wraps in Packard's Corner. The brick-and-mortar serves punny wraps like the "Wrappers Delight" with smoked tempeh "bacon" and special sauce alongside Indian-style plates and fried tofu tacos. 1096 Commonwealth Ave.

Tatte

The ever-expanding bakery and café opened new locations in the Seaport and near Northeastern University in 2018, and will soon open their first location downtown. That's great news for anyone looking to grab a crunchy halloumi salad or a farro bowl on the go. Various locations

Whole Heart Provisions

BRIAN SAMUELS

This local fast-casual spot serving meatless bowls had a big 2018, opening its second and third locations in Central Square and Harvard Square, respectively. The signature bowls that made its original Allston location—like the "Cassie" filled with Japanese eggplant, crispy chickpeas and creamy harissa sauce—haven't changed. Various locations

Zing Bowl

A trip to the mall food court doesn't typically end with healthy eating, but Zing Bowl changed that equation by opening within CambridgeSide this year. Trust us: you'll be glad you replaced your Taco Bell run with a quick acai bowl or a nutty green salad with quinoa. 100 CambridgeSide Pl., Cambridge

Andy Samberg and Sandra Oh host this year's Golden Globes.
TIAE PATTON/NBC

Our top predictions for the 2019 Golden Globes

Find out who'll win, who won't and what will happen at this year's ceremony.

ANDREW HUSBAND

The Golden Globe Awards return Sunday on NBC. There's not a whole lot of time between now and then, so if you're looking to hedge your bets and make a few last-minute predictions, then consider our thoughts on who's most likely to win — and who's not.

Sandra Oh is going to steal the show

Soon after Kevin Hart was initially announced as the host of the upcoming Academy Awards telecast, the Golden Globes tried to overshadow the Oscars by declaring that Sandra Oh and Andy Samberg would be co-hosting its awards ceremony. Of course, Hart subsequently departed his Oscar hosting duties following criticism of his homophobic jokes and tweets, but Oh and Samberg? They're still on the docket for the Golden Globes, which is great news since their pairing as co-presenters for the 2018 Emmys was praised across the board.

They're going to make fun of the Oscars

The Oscars-Hart controversy notwithstanding, it's a good bet that either Oh, Samberg or at least one of the presenters or winners at the 2019 Golden Globes is going to mention it. Whether it's a scripted (and approved) moment or an impromptu joke or speech, the Academy's glaring public relations disaster is definitely going to be on the minds of everyone in attendance at the Golden Globe Awards ceremony. Everyone watching at home is surely going to be thinking about it, too.

'Black Panther' isn't going to win much...

Marvel Studios has been pushing hard for "Black Panther"'s recognition by the various award bodies in the industry this past year. This is especially true of both the Oscars and the Golden Globes, and while the former's nominations haven't been announced yet, the latter's have. The result? Ryan Coogler's acclaimed blockbuster scored three nominations for Best Motion Picture (Drama), Best Original Score and Best Original Song. As great as this is, however, chances are "Black Panther" isn't going to win a single one.

...but 'A Star Is Born' is Why? Because, at least in terms of the Best Motion Picture category, "Black Panther" is facing off against the likes of "BlacKkKlansman" and "If Beale Street Could Talk." It's also matched against Bradley Cooper and Lady Gaga's "A Star Is Born," the third remake of the original 1937 film and, despite this, one of the year's most acclaimed and popular films. Seeing as how music-heavy it is, "A Star Is Born" will likely beat "Black Panther" in the two categories they share nominations in. It will also undoubtedly earn trophies for Cooper, Gaga and the majority of its nominees.

Expect a lot of TV snubs

Many of the best shows were recognized in this year's nominations. Many others, however, were not. Newcomers like "Killing Eve" and "Barry" and returning favorites like "The Good Place" and "The Americans" scored various nominations. But what about "Atlanta," "Bojack Horseman" or "American Vandal"? The former was a huge favorite last year, but aside from Donald Glover's acting nod, the Globes gave little to "Atlanta." Animated series like "Bojack" are routinely ignored. As for "Vandal," despite the fact that its first season won a Peabody Award, it seems the Globes don't really care.

In addition to the Grumble about annoying car horns from the Dec. 19 Metro, I would like to add that what is even more annoying is the same person...every Sunday... at 11 a.m. honking his horn for the same person who by now should know to be ready at 11 a.m. on Sunday morning!! This person annoyingly honks his horn about four times, waking up the entire block just so he can pick up his family member. My neighbor asked him very nicely to please stop honking his horn and to use a cellphone to call the family member rather than honk his horn so loudly on a peaceful Sunday morning, and he in turn yelled at her, "Go back to sleep!!" I am begging my neighbor to please cut it out!!!

From increasing the legal age to purchase cigarettes to lowering the state income tax, a look at the new laws impacting the commonwealth.

nhoman@metro.us

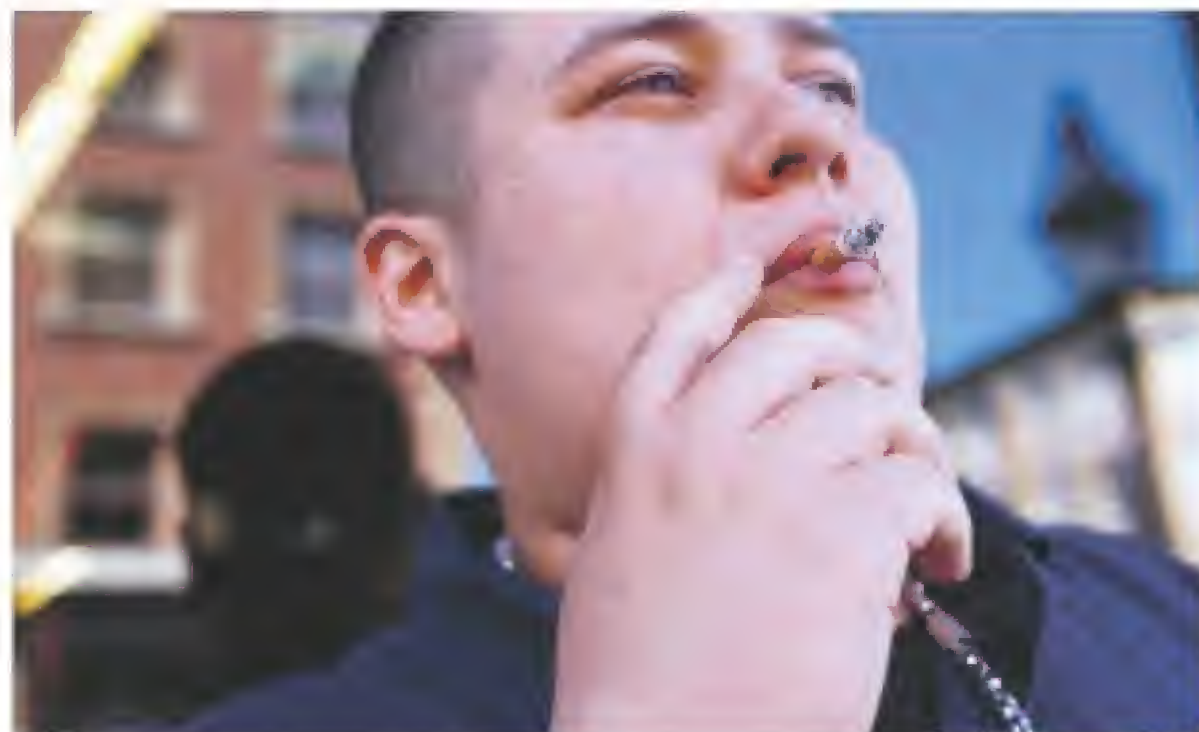

The legal age to buy tobacco in the commonwealth has gone up, as did the state's minimum wage as part of Massachusetts' new laws that began Jan. 1.

The state income tax rate has come down, and new prison inmate placement and treatment regulations are now in effect.

About 662,000 workers will see an increase in their paychecks as minimum wage climbs from $11 to $12 as part of an annual increase that will set the hourly wage at $15 in 2023. The Bay State joins California and Washington as the states with the highest minimum wage.

The sub-minimum wage for restaurant servers and other tipped workers will increase from $3.75 to $4.35 an hour, eventually reaching $6.75 by 2023. Time-and-a-half pay on Sundays will phase out as a result of the change.

Anyone who didn't turn 18 by Dec. 31 will have to wait, as the legal age to purchase cigarettes, e-cigs and other tobacco products has been upped from 18 to 21 years old. The measure punishes retailers who sell to underage customers, but does not make it a crime for minors to smoke tobacco.

The state income tax will drop from 5.1 percent to 5.05 percent. The state also tacked on a $2 surcharge for rented vehicles. Proceeds from the fee will go into a fund for police officer training programs. If the surcharge exceeds $10 million in any year, the additional money will go into the state's General Fund.

Gov. Charlie Baker and Beacon Hill lawmakers crafted stricter guidelines for "restrictive housing" and solitary confinement usage in order to minimize risk of serious mental health damage caused by restrictive housing as part of a large-scale overhaul of the Massachusetts criminal justice system.

Inmates will also be provided with clothing and other items consistent with their gender identities and may request that an officer performing a body search be of the same gender.

Sen. Elizabeth Warren: 'Washington is corrupt'

U.S. Sen. Elizabeth Warren visited the State House on Wednesday to help celebrate the start of a new legislative session on Beacon Hill as she prepares to take her own oath in Washington later this week and then head to Iowa for the first trip of her young presidential campaign.

Warren, who announced on New Year's Eve that she would set up an exploratory committee to run for president in 2020, said she's hoping to listen to voters all over the country. But as she prepares to head to Iowa, she did not disclose any plans to visit the first-in-the-nation primary state of New Hampshire.

"I sure hope to. I hope to get out and talk to people everywhere," Warren said about the prospects of visiting New Hampshire soon.

Warren, along with U.S. Sen. Edward Markey and other officials, attended the swearing-in ceremonies for lawmakers in both the House and Senate as Legislature kicked off a new two-year session on Wednesday. She arrived at the State House with Boston Mayor Marty Walsh, with whom she had coffee prior to the events.

"Sen. Liz Warren, they gave me nothing about you," House Dean Rep. Angelo Scaccia said as he introduced Warren and other high-ranking state officials during Wednesday's session. "You also are going on to bigger and better things, later. I appreciate what you have done in the short time you have been our United States senator. Another individual who has brought equality in so many issues to the people in this state and to the people of the United States of America."

Earlier in the day, Warren's campaign announced that she would be making a four-city swing through Iowa this weekend, with stops planned in Council Bluffs, Sioux City, Storm Lake and Des Moines.

"I am in this fight because I believe Washington is working for the rich and the powerful. I believe Washington is corrupt. I see it firsthand. That's what pulls me in. That's why I'm in this fight," Warren told a scrum of reporters from both local and national outlets waiting for her outside the House chamber.

Warren brushed off questions about her popularity outside of Massachusetts and recent polls that have raised questions about her viability as a national candidate.

Wrestling world remembers 'Mean Gene' Okerlund

Professional wrestling announcer Gene Okerlund, nicknamed "Mean Gene" for his verbal sparring with the gimmicky sport's muscled gladiators including Hulk Hogan and "Macho Man" Randy Savage, died on Wednesday, World Wrestling Entertainment said. He was 76.

Okerlund launched his interviewing career at the American Wrestling Association in the 1970s and went on to work for the World Wrestling Federation, later renamed the WWE and World Championship Wrestling.

"WWE extends its condolences to Okerlund's family, friends and fans," the organization said on its website.

WWE officials did not respond immediately to queries over the circumstances of Okerlund's demise. Other representatives of Okerlund could not be reached for comment.

their condolences on Twitter on Wednesday.

Hulk Hogan, one of the sport's best-known former champions, said on Twitter: "Mean Gene I love you my brother."

Hogan inducted Okerlund into the WWE Hall of Fame in 2006.

Metro Sports makes its bold

What might we see from the Pats, Sox, B's and C's this year?

METRO SPORTS STAFF
sports@metro.us

JULIAN EDLOW

1. The Celtics make the NBA Finals — The Toronto Raptors finish first in the Eastern Conference, but the Celtics manage to take them down in the ECF in six games. Unfortunately, the fun comes to an end against the Warriors.

2. Danny Ainge makes a draft day trade — But will it be for Anthony Davis? Boston will certainly give its all to try and make sure it is. Remember, as things stand, the Celtics would wind up with four first-round picks in June.

This team simply doesn't have room to use those picks.

3. The Red Sox part ways with Chris Sale — It was fun while it lasted, and 2019 is going to be a crucial year for a Red Sox team that has a realistic shot to repeat as World Series Champions. But with what Sale could command in the offseason, Boston won't be willing to pay the price tag after the cash they dished out this offseason, and soon will have to in order to keep your stars like Mookie Betts and Xander Bogaerts.

4. The Patriots lose in the Super Bowl ... again — The Patriots simply aren't as good as they've been in past years, but the rest of the AFC is showing plenty of weakness as well. Kansas City is primed to lose at home, potentially leaving the road to the Super Bowl to come through Foxborough. I'd be more fearful of hot teams like the Chargers and Ravens.

5. Brian Hoyer will not be the Patriots' backup QB to start the 2019 season — I'm not saying Tom Brady won't be the starter, but it's time to get the ball moving on an insurance policy. Brady's looked average down the stretch in 2018. Time to light a fire under him in the offseason with a legitimate threat backing him up.

JIMMY TOSCANO

1. The Patriots advance to Super Bowl LIII but lose to the Saints, whose offense proves to be too much for the Pats to keep up with.

2. Rob Gronkowski doesn't retire at the end of this season but plays his final season under contract with the Patriots and then hangs them up in 2020. Tom Brady also isn't going anywhere.

3. After being bounced in the Eastern Conference Finals to the Toronto Raptors, Kyrie Irving keeps his word and re-signs with the Celtics to a max deal. Everyone is on the trading block except Irving and Jayson Tatum. The C's have interest in Anthony Davis in the offseason but do not acquire him. He ends up with the Lakers.

4. The Yankees sign Manny Machado and win the AL East. The Red Sox make the playoffs as a Wild Card but lose to the Yanks in the ALCS. The rivalry is back in full force.

5. After he was relegated to the backup goalie role behind Jaroslav Halak, the Bruins trade Tuukka Rask in the offseason.

DANNY PICARD

1. The New England Patriots will win Super Bowl LIII — So many people will disagree with this, which is why it's probably going to be a correct prediction. You're watching the calm before the storm. The Pats will be champs again, and maybe for the final time.

THIS IS THE BILL BELICHICK YOU'VE NEVER SEEN

This is the Hall of Fame-bound coach of the New England Patriots revealed through a window that was previously open to only a select group of sportswriters who cover the team. This is the Belichick who shows up to intimate Friday press conferences and lets his hair down to talk about everything from detailed football strategy to communication, decision-making, and technology. This is the book that every fan of the game needs to read, about the man that none of us really know.

predictions for Boston's squads in 2019

2. Anthony Davis will be traded . . . to the Lakers — This isn't a "Boston" sports prediction, but at the same time, it kind of is. So many people in Boston have been talking about trading for AD in the summer. AD will get traded alright, but to LeBron James' Lakers.

3. The Bruins will trade Tuukka Rask — I would hate to see this happen, but perhaps the return could be too good to pass up if you're the Bruins. Rask is being outplayed by Jaroslav Halak. And maybe the team and Rask — who took a leave of absence earlier in the year — will feel a change of scenery is necessary.

4. The Red Sox will trade Jackie Bradley Jr. — Bradley Jr. will be a free agent after the 2019 season. He'll be 29 in April. He's only hit better than .250 once (.267 in 2016) in his six years in the league. And his agent is Scott Boras. Expect Mookie Betts in center field and J.D. Martinez in right field.

5. The Celtics will win the East, but lose to Golden State in the Finals — The C's have had their issues this season, but they'll advance to the Finals, only to run into a Warriors team that's destined for the three-peat.

RICHARD SLATE

1. The Celtics will reach the 2019 NBA Finals — Despite plenty of ups and downs during the 2018-19 regular season, they'll turn it on in the postseason and advance out of the LeBron-less Eastern Conference to reach the Finals (where they should have been in 2018). Obviously, there they will lose to Golden State, who are coming toward the end of their dynasty.

2. Rob Gronkowski won't be a Patriot in 2019 — Tom Brady and/or Bill Belichick might both be gone as well, but the surest bet seems to be that Rob Gronkowski won't be a Patriot anymore as he changes careers and goes to the WWE. Speaking of dynasties coming to a crashing halt: The Pats will reach yet another AFC Championship Game, but they will lose to whoever is the No. 1 seed (either Kansas City or Los Angeles) since they simply cannot win on the road in 2018.

3. The Bruins will lose in the Eastern Conference Finals — Under head coach Bruce Cassidy, the B's have gone one round longer than the previous season, meaning that they're due for an Eastern Conference Finals appearance, where they will lose to the Tampa Bay Lightning. Still, they'll continue to put together pieces of a Cup-winning team, which they will be again with some of these current players.

4. The Red Sox won't repeat as champs — This is not exactly going out on a limb since it's so hard to win back-to-back titles in MLB. The Red Sox should capture another AL East title (their fourth in a row) but with teams like the Astros and Yankees nipping at their heels, they will falter in October.

5. Boston College junior running back AJ Dillon will be a Heisman finalist and a first-round draft pick — With better health than in his injury-plagued sophomore season, the Eagles superstar is sure to have a monster campaign. Even rarer than a Heisman candidate from BC is a standout running back that stays in college for all four years. So enjoy his swan song at the Heights, everybody.

Do you have type 2 diabetes?

Why are we doing this study?

Having high or low blood sugar levels can cause many different health problems in people with diabetes. We are doing this study to investigate two different insulin (or their ability to keep the blood sugar stable and close to normal.

Why participate in a clinical study?

By participating, you will contribute to improve the treatment options for people with type 2 diabetes. You will also take an active role in your own health care and you may learn more about the management of your diabetes. All clinical studies have a number of potential benefits but also potential risks. The study doctor will explain these to you before you decide to participate or not.

If so, you may want to consider participating in a clinical study which will compare the effect on blood sugar levels of two medicines: insulin degludec (100 U/mL) and insulin glargine (100 U/mL), in people with type 2 diabetes.

What is the study about?

The study participants will be asked to wear a small (35mm) small blood sugar sensor on the back of the upper arm 3 times during the study.

What do I do next?

The SWITCH PRO study is currently looking for study participants. If you are interested in learning more about the study, please contact the study team.
